“ My heart breaks for you. Words can not express the sorrow we have for you in the loss of your son Ben. When we lost our 17 year old daughter Kalyn Whitworth in August of 2009, we did not begin to understand why. As a mom, I offer you my strength and faith that God will walk you through each minute of your pain. My prayers and support are with you every day.

“ Words can't express how sorry I am for your loss. I have never meet your family or your precious son but I recently 12 weeks ago lost my only son in a car accident as well. There are no words that explain how you feel or the ache in your heart. I do know that God will carry you as he is carrying our family. I pray that God gives you the strength to see something beautiful in each day. I pray when it becomes hard to breath that God gives you the breath you need. Remember one second at a time. “ To the family of Ben Laslie:

When I Remember Ben

*When I remember Ben, I think of chubby cheeks and busy hands.
I think of freckles sprayed across his nose and upturned lips.
I think of little feet toddling across a wood floor inquisitively searching.*

*When I remember Ben, I think of him sitting on laps, listening.
I think of him watching the Laslie antics during family get-togethers.
I think of him discovering he too was a Laslie, and joining in on the fun.*

*When I remember Ben, I think of watching Indian in the Cupboard.
I think of conversations about music and reaching the eighth grade.
I think of “picking” on him in the traditional Laslie fashion.*

*When I remember Ben, I think of a bright mind growing into the frame of a young man.
I think of a laid-back boy, content with living in the moment.
I think of a purposeful child, listening to the conversations of his uncles.*

*When I remember Ben, I think of his passion for Carhartt jeans.
I think of a leather belt clad with his name and the pride with which he wore it.
I think of a white shirt tucked inside; Ben’s signature fashion statement.*

*When I remember Ben, I think of dirty hands and oily tools.
I think of his love for horses and for working the land,
I think of a young man, no doubt born with the soul of an old farmer.*

When I remember Ben, I’m reminded of the years he was given.

*I think of all the days he brought joy to those he encountered.
I think of a brief, bright candle that will burn forever in our hearts.*
