“ And He said unto me, “My grace is sufficient for thee: for My strength is made perfect in weakness.” Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me. ” II Corinthians 12:9

*If there was ever a time in my life I was weak, it was the days, weeks, and months after my child died. To know that God’s strength was at its best when I needed it the most gave me courage to take another breath. It seems impossible to “glory in my infirmities”; when you don’t feel you have the strength to go on with your life, but God’s grace is sufficient. There is power through Christ Jesus to sustain you when nothing else can. You must allow Him to carry the burden “there are things too big for us to handle on our own. We cannot as mothers (and fathers) get through the loss of a child and retain any sanity without His help.*

I don’t think it’s wrong to ask “why”; “I have many times over the years. But you have to recognize God’s authority and know that whatever purpose there was for your child, it was fulfilled during the time you carried him. We don’t understand all of it, and honestly I don’t believe we have the capacity to. But I take comfort knowing that one day, God will hold me close and explain it to me in a way that I can understand.

God Bless you and all your family

“ To the entire Mays family, I offer my heartfelt condolences. I really did not know Edward Jr. that well, but have to say his mom and dad, Ed and Anne Wesley are two of the finest people that anyone could ever meet. So many times in the past, when our family needed rock solid support, the Mays family was there for us. I am so sorry for your loss.
