“ I remember looking into your tiny face minutes after you were born as your father so proudly carried you down the hallway of the hospital and your beautiful red hair and thinking how special you were to everyone that was there. Years past away and it was even easier to see that you were able to capture the room with your sincere desire to believe in and trust everyone and this quality was sincere to anyone even a stranger. This is why I am sure that GOD is so glad to have you back with him once again so that your unique gift of love can be shared with everyone just as you have shared it with us. We love and miss you Justin! Please know that we love you and realize that Justin was this special person because of the goodness from the both of you and soon you will be reunited again. This is not the end just a separation for a while. He will be waiting for you again

i am so sorry to hear/read about justin..prayers are going out to you & the rest of the family. (i too know what it is like to lose a son(if u remember my youngest son)& it is hard, believe me. keep praying & keep your faith up and that will give you strength to go on.(i know that sounds harder than what it is). and remember all the good memories.

I thought his name sounded familiar. you two were a great "team" plumbers & i could tell that you are a very proud dad that was able to work side by side w/your son. (which i think u 2 usually came to our house whenever we needed plumbing done.)

again, prayers are with you & your family (& to justins mom & her family as well.
