As I fly to what's in store,

I know I fly with you.

Not in person but in spirit,

that is certainly for sure.

Keep me in prayer until I reach that side so I can dance and sing,

For all those I have lost to then rejoice,

laugh, and love with fully extended wings.

Hopefully not too soon but I'll be doing that someday with you.

Until then my arms are always around you, just know that to be true.

“ My beautiful friend, you will be missed dearly! You were the best to work with and to be around all together. I will never forget all the great laughs and fun times we shared. You truly are a hoot and one of a kind! I love you my friend and will see you again sometime.

My dear friend Kenna, I didn't find out you had died until last night. I contacted a mutual friend of our, asking her if she knew what happened to Melissa Oliver. She told me she thought she had lived with you for a while, but she didn't know where Melissa had gone after you died. What a shock! I know you're not here to read this, but I want your husband and daughter to know you were so loved by everyone. I remember you stopping by mine and Tom's little apartment in Fincastle when we were first married. When you had your son, I remember asking what I could send as a baby gift, you said a gown that had elastic at the bottom so you could easily put a diaper on him without waking him. I only bring that up because I had never heard of such an outfit. LOL! Then when people started saying they were sorry to you, I realized you were going through the worse thing a parent can go through, your son shot himself. I prayed for you and your family so much back then. Love you Kenna and this world we missing a special gal. RIP!!!

“ My beautiful TN friend. We became bff's all because you jewed my husband down on the cost of a golf cart. We were mischievous together, laughed together and at each other, cried on each other's shoulders and oh so much more. I send my condolences to all whom shared your love. Your work on earth is complete, go fly high and be with your mom, dad and Andrew. I'll be looking for you to send me signs from heaven. My heart is shattered but you will live on in my heart and memories forever. I love you girlfriend 💕💕💕
