“ Louise's influence on her children and grandchildren and the importance of her faith are gifts that will continue to enrich their lives to the end of their days. Her community of friends was far-reaching, and especially those who knew her over a span of years have many lasting memories of good times shared.

She was also a frank and commonsense person, I remember that her strongest phrase of dismissal was "Oh fizzle". She was well organized, a trait that every farmer's wife needs, even to being prepared for church dinners, an important part of rural life. She could produce chicken and dumplings or rhubarb pie, her signature dishes, in any season, as well as her special sugar cookies for the grandchildren and greats.

A life well lived.
