“ I've known Mark since I've been old enough to know anyone. He is not blood family to me but he was always who I turned to if I needed help or needed advice. He taught me everything that I know about a lot of stuff. He was a man who loved his kids and his grandkids. He didn't judge anyone at all for anything.

So much I could say. He was like a brother to me. As kids I lost someone dear to me. He took me away from all the adults. A long walk in the woods. Something I will always cherish deep n my heart. Bless his mom she told him you take care of her for awhile. An he did. Mark it just won't be the same not getting that out the blue text. Gonna miss ya.

“ He was the littlest one of us kids running around Alexander St. We dressed him up and played with him like a doll baby. His little smile is what I remember most. Mark, you will be missed, more than you will ever know. Fly High Cousin.

Mark was our baby: Angela, Tammy, Lori and mine. Aunt Joyce let us feed him, dress him and supervised us bathing him. I remember changing his diaper. There were no disposable diapers back then. Aunt Jo showed me how to put my fingers between his little hip and the pin. First one was hard but I got it done after stabbing myself. The next one, I was very skiddish. Yep, I stabbed poor MarkE's little him. The look he gave me before he screamed in pain made Aunt Jo snork her hot tea out of her nose. And, no, I wasn't allowed to change him again.
