“ Hard to find words to express my sadness for her family and friends. She was great and so loved by everyone. My last visit with Sis was awesome. Little did I know it would be the last. I came thru the door at her home and she was wearing a mask. I know chemo can cause a person's immune system to get weak. So I backed up, turned around and was headed for the car to get my mask. Sis said, hold up, you don't need a mask, I don't have my teeth in. We both got tickled and had a good laugh. We hugged each other, I kissed her on the cheek and we exchanged I love you's to each other. Perfect! Fly high my friend, rest and enjoy your new journey!!!

“ I haven't seen Sis in many years. To the family, I'm so very sorry for your sadness and loss. Sis was a testament to the kind of person one should want to be. All the beautiful memories and comments on her tribute are proof of that, they are also all true! Like Connie said she was the best of everything. She also loved her some UK anything! She didn't hesitate to tell it like it was or to tell you about yourself. Crystal, coming up Sis set me straight a time or two! She loved everyone and she made sure they knew and felt it. Rest in Peace and Glory Sis.

Still hard to believe. I'm going to miss our card games at your house. You brought us all together after many years of going our separate ways. Im thankful for that. I'm going to miss your "crack" dip (if you know, you know). But the best times were during our softball years. We made lifelong friends on the ball field. You made me a part of your family. Im forever grateful for your friendship. I'm going to miss you dear friend. Love ya much homey. ❤️

“ Sis was a staple in the Bickers family. She was the one that would bring people together because everyone loved her. She would always express her love for those she cared for which were many. I adored her honesty. She didn't sugar coat anything she expressed her feelings without hesitation. Sis was an all around wonderful person that so many of us looked up to and admired. She will definitely be missed
