“ Welby, although I knew you for only a short time I am a better person for knowing and visiting with you. From your early career as a leader and trainer of soldiers through fighting in World war II, then protecting our personnel in the foreign service you had a rich, exciting life. Your insight and intelligence have touched many people. I will cherish the memories of our talks the rest of my life. I learned many, many things in a short amount of time; who would guess that a person could manipulate dice to avoid loosing! I will miss our talks Welby, I salute you and your service to our Nation.

“ Dear Eric, I'm so sorry to learn of your dear Dad's passing. I didn't know until Priscilla emailed me. Guess I missed it in the paper. This is a sad, emotional and busy time for you. He certainly lived a long and eventful life. I wish I could come to the service, but we'll be out of town. But I hope to see you before long. Your lifelong friend,
Elanor.
