“ The Shell

*As we walk along our lives path, I imagine I am on a beach I feel the sand and breezes, from the edge of lifeâ€TMS ebbs and tides I spot a shell upon the shore, where life once had thrived And wonder where the creature went, that once had lived inside
I walked on and looked out upon and ocean deep and wide
And as I looked down upon the shell
As it was taken by the tide
It was caught up in the waves of life, which were bound up on the shore
Now it sails in memories of beauty unexplored
So when the sands of time wash gently under our feet
Remember the shell that lyeâ€TMS in the sand
It has washed out on memories tides
That no longer you can see Beyond those human boundaries where memory only sees Exploring new horizons where we all long to be
